

2022 Picturing Writing Summer Institute

Week of June 27 - Virtual - Mornings Only

Address Learning Loss through an evidence-based approach that engages all learners

Picturing Writing is an innovative, evidence-based approach to teaching writing designed to meet the needs of a wide range of learners. Through the use of simple crayon resist art techniques, the study of quality picture books, and an on-going Artist/Writers Workshop, this highly scaffolded, multimodal approach gives students access to visual as well as verbal tools for developing and recording their ideas. Because pictures offer a universal language, Picturing Writing allows students to enter the reading/writing process from a position of strength and enthusiasm. It provides an enticing, alternative pathway into writing for English Learners and others who struggle with language-based skills.

This year's virtual summer institute will include writing in 5 genres: descriptive writing, informative writing, poetry, inquiry-based poetry, and inquiry-based narrative. All units can be easily aligned with grade-level English Language Arts Standards while also addressing Next Generation Science Standards. Supported by best practices and three decades of independent research, this unique, proven practice can be easily adapted to any elementary grade level and integrated across the curriculum.

Join originator Beth Olshansky virtually from 8:00 AM - noon ET each day to experience the process firsthand. All workshop art and instructional materials will be shipped directly to you. A classroom art materials kit can be included as part of the summer institute fee. Graduate credit options are available through Southern New Hampshire University for summer institute and/or classroom implementation.

I have never in my 30 years of teaching seen first graders write like this or be so attuned to literature. This approach works for my low readers and writers; it challenges my top students; and it supports those in the middle.

- Merrilee Thissell, first-grade teacher

Picturing Writing allowed all my children to be successful. It provided wonderful concrete tools for rehearsal, drafting, and revision. I saw the most growth with my lowest students.

- Millie Parks, fifth-grade teacher

I had great success using these methods with English Learners and other at-risk students. This visual approach promotes oral language skills and writing that flows directly from the pictures students have painted with care.

- Donna Garcia, Instructor of Language & Literacy, UNM
